ABSTRACT

A method of planarizing a semiconductor wafer includes applying a CMP process to a layer of dielectric material to planarize the wafer surface, and applying a plasma etching process to the wafer surface until a signal is generated from a detection layer that indicates that said detection layer has been removed from underlying features disposed on the wafer.